George Peabody's Name and Memory.

London, Nov. 5, 1869. The London Post in an oblivary article says:— The London Post in an oblivary article says:—
Mr. Peabody was one of the few whose private virtures are followed by public fame and whose virtures may be cited as examples. In laying the foundation of wholesome and cheerful homes for the working classes, he acted upon a high sense of duty soft touched the mainsprings of civilization. He made his name the measure of his philanthropy. Phroughout his whole life his conduct displayed a partiy of character that could not tail to elevate and refine the feelings his generosity inspired.

The Telegraph says:-Mr. Peabody's lot was doubly happy. The inscription on his mansoleum may fell with unquestioned truth of the man who loved his kind and served two

The news of Mr. Peabody's death will be received with no common sorrow on both sides of the Atlantic. The sentiment of regret will not be a mere passing tribute of gratitude to a munificent benefactor. Mr. Peabody, through a long life, accumulated manifold titles to be lamented. He was an ardent patriot, and loved abroad as much as at home. He was a New Englander, who, when the South was bowed down to the dust, stepped forward and claimed the right to succer it. He was no courtier, yet ne was honored by sovereigns and princes. He was profuse in his charity, which pauperized nobody. He was a philanthropist who was liked as well as honored. There was nothing, hard or narrow about his philanthropy; he simply did whatever good caine in his way. The news of Mr. Peabody's death will be received

Meeting in Chicago—Speech of Professor Perry, of Massachusets. CHICAGO, Nov. 5, 1889. The free traders offthis city held a meeting this evening at Farwell Hall. The attendance was very good, including many of the representative citizens from all parties. Colonel J. W. Foster pre-sided. After a few remarks he introduced Professor Perry, of Williams College, Williams town, Mass. He was received with cordia applicase. He said he came to ask the people of Chicago what they thought of the tariff. As for himself he had for twenty years been satisfied that a protective tariff was an abomination, but he had never fully realized !is power for wrong and outrage until his visit to the West, which cominenced a few weeks since. Here among the people its enormity could not be covered up. He was for liberty—that word expressed all. No government had the right to say that the reward of his industry should be taken to reward the industry of another man. Equal protection to all, and a fair field and no favor, were the American maxims. The government nad a right to take enough of his lindustry to carry itself on, but beyond that is and in right to a dime; and if it did take more the people had a right to as, "Take of your linguistic and the people had a right to as," Take of your linguistic and the people had a right to as," Take of your linguistic and the people had a right to as," Take of your linguistic and the people had a right to as," Take of your linguistic and the means in their power. A few young men in this country holding his creed have to come to an understanding with each other on this unject, and indicessanding with each other on this unject, and indicessand in the right to levy taxes except for revenue purposes. On this principle they expect to fight their battless until the victory is won. To their creed the point of the reverse of the reverse of American labor when the profits of mining and manufacturing were largest the price of labor did not increase, the profits all went to the employers and not to the employee. Simply taking profits of American labors when the profits of the laborer find that a collar in this protected country will buy more than it will in unprotected country will buy more than it will in unprotected countries like Germany, Esigum, &c. Professor Perry will buy more than the will be a sea, such as blankets, woollen undershirts, &c. On Monday last David English, a selp captain, called at the United States Hotel, in Fulton street, and entered his name on the register, and was assigned to room No. 85, which he occupied that night. Shortly before twelve o'clock the following might Captain English went to bed and at two o'clock the next day the chambermaid endeavored to gain admittance to the room for the purpose of putting it in order, but it was secured from within. Suspecting something wrong, the girl mounted a chair and, looking through the fanlight over the door, discovered Captain English lying on the bed and the smell of gas in the room was very strong. The girl immediately reported the matter to the office, when one of the clerks burst open the room door and found Mr. English lying in a state of insensibility, the room being full of gas and the gas from the burner flowing with full force.

A physician was immediately called to attend Captain English, but he never railled and died early yesterday morning. The above state of facts were lestified to by Mr. George N. Terry, proprietor of the hotel. The jury rendered a verdict of death by polsonous inhalastion of gas, deceased having accidentally left the gas in his room turned on during the night of the 3d of November. Deceased was forty-seven years of age and a native of this country.

The Rev. William H. Milburn, the blind preacher, last night delivered his second lecture at Steinway Hall, his subject being "What a Blind Man Saw in Paris." remarks by frequent applause. The lecture consists of a very vivid and interesting description of the French capital, and though the lecturer was unable to see that which he described, his pictures of the beauties and objects of interest in the great city were at once graphic and trutafut.

After some general remarks about Paris the lecturer proceeded with his descriptions of the city, commencing with the Piace de la Concorde. It was here that the token of French civilization, the guillouine, was lifted up during the revolution, and on the site where it stood there was now to be seen a large obelisk. Looking from this place the eye caught glimpses of the branches of the trees in the garden of the Tulleries; farther on the waters of the Scine could be seen, and yet further were noticed the Chamber of the Corps Legislatif, the Champs de Mars and the dome of the Invalides, where rested the dust of the great Napoleon, which dust had power enough to lead to the foundation of another throne in imperial France. The speaker them took his nearers on to the Bonicovards, explaining the manner in which they were laid out and the destruction of dwelling houses which was necessary for their formation. A stranger, he said, looking at these beautiful thoroughfares could scarcely believe the tribute of his senses; the dream of an earthly parasite seemed to have been realized. Mr. Milburn then described a walk upon the Bonicovards roma the Grand Hotel to the Eastile. The time selected for the promenade was one o'clook, as until that hour in the morning Faris could not be considered to be really awake and in the streets. In the course of the Imperial Faris could not be considered to be really awake and in the streets. In the course of the imaginary walk the lecturer referred to many of the customs and peculiarities of the French people. He also stated that the American girls were the prettiest girls that could be seen in Paris, and that these hiddes, charmed with the pleasant, polite manners of the Frenchmen, often thought that t

No indictment against any gold conspirator and no talk of such was heard in the neighborhood of the council room. There is a great deal of superfluous importance attached to this judicial conclave. From beginning to end the whole investigation has been conducted in a farcical manner. Jay Gould, for instance, was summoned as a witness when he should have been mideted as a principal. It is no exaggeration to predict that the entire proceedings will end in a virtual whitewashing of the chief conspirators as the result of no expression whatever of opinion on the evidence presented.

At the time he was in command of the Yantic, attached to the North Atlantic fleet, and caught the yellow fever, of which he died, while in West India waters. Commander abbott was a native of Rhode Island. He entered the navy from Massachusetts, of which State he was a resident, in October, 1848; and after passing through the various grades, was promoted to the rank of commander in December, 1847. In December of last year he was ordered to the command of the Yantic. Commander Abbott was a gallant and able officer, whose death will be greatly regretted.

The Aurilave, or Ear Brush, is a new patented article, the primary office of which is to pleasantly, safely and thoroughly centesethe our, and te thereby preserve it in a sound, heating, objectionable and dangerous of brush, which is made of the finest togical and the property of the security fastened to the finest, togical angued to take the place thereto employed for that purpose, and the property of the security fastened to the heating, and the latter is encased its soft rubber, about an unch backward from the brush end, so that the hard subtance composing it may not come in contact with the bar when the instrument is used.
On being suttably moistened for using the sponge becomes soft and pliant, and when introduced into the ear immediately conforms to the irregular surface of its internal structure, and removes without roughness all deposits or extranocus matter from the interations and illuing, and effects a thorough ablution of every part of the organ. The All IIILAVE may, therefore, be truly considered an indispensable toilet article. It is also especially adapted for use in the surrenty, and is highly commended at ears, beneficial and effective in the treatment of auricular affections. Deafness, arising from many course, can be cured by using it. Water
